Abaty Santes Fair, Ynys Enlli

St. Mary's Abbey, Bardsey Island

Roedd Ynys Enlli'n gyrchfan pwysig i bererinion Cristnogol y canoloesoedd. Yn wir, y sôn oedd bod tri ymweliad â'r fan hon yn gyfwerth ag un ymweliad â Rhufain. Heddiw, mae'r ynys yn warchodfa natur ac yn cynnig lle tawel a rhyfeddol i archwilio. Bwrwch am adfeilion Abaty'r Santes Fair yn y gogledd. Dim ond adfail o dŵr o'r 13eg ganrif sy'n sefyll heddiw, a gafodd ei adeiladu pan gafodd Priordy Awstinaidd ei sefydlu yma dan deyrnasiad Llywelyn Fawr. Mae modd gweld dwy garreg fedd canoloesol o fynachlog gynharach y tu mewn i'r tŵr.

Bardsey Island was an important destination for medieval Christian pilgrims. Indeed, it was said that three visits here were equivalent to one visit to Rome. Today, the island is a nature reserve and offers a peaceful and fascinating place to explore. Head for the remains of St Mary's Abbey in the north. Only the remnant of a 13th-century tower stand today, built when an Augustinian Priory was established here under the reign of Llywelyn the Great. Two medieval gravestones from an earlier monastery at this sitecan be seen inside the tower.
